

AI DIGITAL SOCIETY • GUIDE

They Already Wrote It

How to find the hooks (and the products) your audience is already asking for. No guessing. No tech skills. Just listening.

7 SIMPLE STEPS

40 READY HOOKS

6 AI PROMPTS

WORKSHEETS

Josée Bédard

Founder, AI Digital Society

EDITION 1 • 2026

Your people have been writing your posts all along.

You just didn't know where to look. This guide shows you where, and what to do once you find them.

Every example in these pages comes from real comment sections I studied in September 2026 on YouTube, Instagram and Substack. I shortened some and removed every name, because the point isn't who said it. The point is how they said it.

What you'll walk away with

- 1 A 7-step method
for finding hooks in the comments, in about 30 minutes a week.
- 2 40 ready-made hooks
from my own research that you can borrow and adapt.
- 3 6 copy-and-paste AI prompts
that do the sorting and writing with you.
- 4 A way to find your next product
by spotting the problem people keep asking about.

HONESTY NOTE

This guide won't promise you income, followers or viral posts. Nobody can honestly promise those. What it gives you is a simple habit that means you'll never stare at a blank page again.

MEET YOUR GUIDE

Hi, I'm Josée.

I'm 58. I don't code. AI runs 90% of my business, and I show people exactly how, for free.

If you want an online business but you're not the techy type, you're in the right place.

For years I did everything myself. I learned every skill, worked the long weeks, and my health paid the price. Not anymore. Now AI employees I built inside Claude do 90% of the work, I approve the 10%, and content goes out every day while I'm out living my life.

30,000+

DIGITAL PRODUCTS SOLD

Top 3%

AFFILIATE RANKING

140K

FACEBOOK FOLLOWERS

I share those numbers for one reason only: so you know the work behind the advice is real.

I'm not a guru selling dreams. I'm a creator who has built, lost, and rebuilt, more than once.

WHY THIS GUIDE EXISTS

After everything I've built and lost, I've learned that the people who do well online aren't the loudest. They're the ones who listen best. This guide is how I listen.

No shortcuts. No luck.

Here's how it actually went, from a rural mail route to a business run by AI employees.

THE EARLY DAYS

The mail route

I was a rural mail carrier. Like a lot of people, I tried every "get rich quick" thing out there and earned nothing. I was broke, discouraged, and convinced online business wasn't for me.

THE FIRST WIN

I stopped chasing. I started building.

I quit the hype and learned real skills: my own digital products, plus offers I actually believed in. That combination finally worked.

THE AGENCY YEARS

Seven years of success that almost broke me

I built a full digital marketing agency. Big clients. Industry recognition. And the price: on call 24/7, 80-hour weeks, no boundaries.

THE COLLAPSE

My body gave out

I burned out completely and landed in the ICU. In that hospital bed I asked myself: what's the point of building a business if it breaks you? I couldn't answer it. So I shut it all down.

THE REBUILD

Rebuilding, quietly, with AI

I rebuilt differently this time: calmly, on my terms. I sat down with Claude, taught it my story and my voice, and built my brain file. Then I created my AI employees. Seven employees. Zero payroll.

NOW

Sharing what I know, freely

Today I create content full time. My AI employees do 90% of the work, I approve the 10%, and I press publish. I share everything I learn inside my free community, and I answer every question there myself.

My story is my own, from years of full-time work. It is not typical and it is not a promise of your results.

What's inside

- 01 The blank page problem: how I found 30+ hooks in one afternoon
- 02 Why your best hooks aren't in your head
- 03 Step 1: Search their fear, not your topic
- 04 Step 2: Pick the right posts
- 05 Step 3: Read the comments, not the post
- 06 Step 4: Copy their exact words
- 07 Step 5: Sort them into piles
- 08 Step 6: Their words + your answer
- 09 Step 7: Post it and watch
- 10 The goldmine: 8 things I learned
- 11 40 hooks from my research
- 12 Bonus: Find your next product in the comments
- 13 How I actually did it: Claude + Eden
- 14 Go further: your own ebook + posting with Blotato
- 15 Your 30-minute weekly routine
- 16 The prompt pack
- 17 Worksheets

CHAPTER 01

The blank page problem

You sit down to post. You open your phone. And your mind goes completely blank.

I used to guess. Now I collect.

So you do what everyone does. You guess. You write something that "sounds good." You post it. Eleven people see it.

I did this for a long time.

Then one afternoon, I read the comments under one YouTube video. A 71-year-old man had shared how he started his channel. There were 750 comments under it.

By the end of that afternoon, I had more than 30 hooks. Not hooks I made up. Hooks my people had already written, in their own words.

Here's one of them:

R

YouTube comment • 124 likes

I'm 62 and close to posting my first 3 videos... you give all the newbies hope.

That's not a comment. That's a hook. It has an age, a feeling, and a person who's stuck right before starting. I could never have written something that good by guessing.

So I stopped guessing. Now I collect.

This guide shows you exactly how.

Why your best hooks aren't in your head

When someone reads a hook in their own words, they feel like you read their mind. That's the whole secret.

Most people write hooks like a marketer. But your audience doesn't talk like that. They talk like a person at a kitchen table.

HOW MARKETERS WRITE

- "Unlock your potential!"
- "5 secrets to success!"
- "Transform your life today!"

HOW YOUR PEOPLE TALK

- "I've been thinking about this for years."
- "I don't even know where to start."
- "Doing something for myself feels strange."

When your hook sounds like the voice inside their own head, they stop scrolling.

You don't need to be a great writer. You need to be a good listener.

The 7 steps at a glance

- 1 Search their fear
, not your topic.
- 2 Pick the right posts
and skip the empty ones.
- 3 Read the comments
, not the post.
- 4 Copy their exact words.
- 5 Sort them into piles
(AI helps here).
- 6 Their words + your answer
= your hook.
- 7 Post it and watch.

Search their fear, not your topic

If you search your topic, you find other creators saying the same things you say. Search what your people are scared of instead.

DON'T SEARCH

- "AI business"
- "digital products"
- "online marketing"

SEARCH

- "too old to start"
- "starting over at 50"
- "don't know where to start"
- "no tech skills"
- "stuck in my job"
- "burnt out at 55"
- "feel invisible after 50"
- "empty nest, now what"

These searches take you straight to real people talking about the exact problem you solve.

Your turn: find your 3 fears

Write down the 3 fears you hear most from your own people. Look in your DMs, your Facebook comments, the questions in your group, and what friends say when you tell them what you do. Those are your search words.

Where to search

PLACE	WHY IT'S GOOD
YouTube	Free, and the most honest comments of all. Open the replies too.
Substack	Long, thoughtful comments from people who read to the end.
Instagram	Great for women 45+. Look for reels with story captions.
Facebook	Groups and pages where your people already hang out.
Eden	The research tool I used for this guide. It finds the posts and saves them to boards for you (see chapter 13). Nice to have, not required.

Pick the right posts

Not every post is worth your time. I studied 8 posts in one week, and 3 of them were a waste.

STUDY THESE

- A real person with a real story. "I'm 71 and I just started a YouTube channel."
- Posts with lots of comments, not just likes.
- Posts where people share their own story back.

SKIP THESE

- "Comment a WORD for the link." The comments are just that word.
- "Age is just a number." Vague posts get vague comments.
- LinkedIn. Mostly people promoting themselves.
- Comments that are only "You look amazing!"

What a "skip" comment section looks like

Nice for the creator. Useless for you. There's no feeling in there to learn from.

A real story brings out real feelings. Real feelings make real hooks.

CHAPTER 05 • STEP 3

Read the comments, not the post

The post is the creator's words. The comments are your audience's words. That's where the gold is.

The 5 kinds of comments to look for

Scroll right past the post. Go straight to the comments, and open the replies too. People are often even more honest there.

1

AGE FIRST TELLS YOU WHAT MATTERS

"I'm 57 and on my 7th video. Was feeling a bit insecure, but I'm continuing."

2

"I'VE BEEN THINKING ABOUT IT" ALMOST READY

"I've had a channel for years, but I have yet to record a video."

3

A REAL FEELING DEEPEST HOOKS

"I've spent so many years looking after others. Doing something for myself feels strange."

4

A QUESTION CONTENT THEY WANT

"Pivot to what?"

5

PUSHBACK WHAT THEY DON'T TRUST

"Can you tell me honestly if you use AI to write your posts? Trust is still important to me."

Why each one matters

- Age first: people name their age almost every time. It tells you how much it matters to them.
- "I've been thinking about it": these people are almost ready. They're your people.
- Feelings: this is where the deepest hooks hide.
- Questions: a question in the comments is content someone is asking you to make.
- Pushback: it shows you exactly what they don't trust, so you can answer it head-on.

Copy their exact words

When a comment makes you stop, copy it exactly as written.

DON'T

- Fix the spelling
- Make it prettier
- Rewrite it in your words yet

DO

- Copy it word for word
- Note their age if they gave it
- Note where you found it

The messy, honest version sounds real. That's exactly what you want.

Your Hook Bank

Make one document called Hook Bank: Their Words. Every time you study a post, add a block like this:

HOOK BANK TEMPLATE

SOURCE: [who / what post / where]

- "exact comment" (age, if they said it)
- "exact comment"
- "exact comment"

WHAT I NOTICED: [one line]

Keep adding to the same document every week. After a month, you'll have more hooks than you can use.

BE KIND WITH THEIR WORDS

Use comments to learn how people talk. When you quote one in public, leave out names and handles, and keep it short.

Sort them into piles

Once you have 20 or more comments, sort them by the fear behind each one. Here are the piles I found for people over 50:

BIGGEST PILE

Don't know where to start

"Pivot to what?" · "I don't know my niche."

 Too old "Is 56 too old to start?"	 Money worry "My pension won't be enough."
 Scared of the camera "I didn't like how I looked on camera."	 "Am I allowed a turn?" "Doing something for myself feels strange."
 Feeling useless or invisible "I suddenly feel disposable."	 Don't trust gurus "They say one thing and do another."

The biggest pile is your main message

I was sure my biggest pile would be "AI is too technical." It wasn't. The biggest pile was "I don't know where to start." People weren't scared of the tech. They didn't know what to start.

LET AI DO THE SORTING

You don't have to sort by hand. Paste your comments into Claude with the Sort Prompt in chapter 16. It takes about a minute. AI does the sorting. You make the choices.

Their words + your answer

THEY SAID

"I'm 62 and close to posting my first video."

YOUR HOOK

I'm 58. If you've been "close to starting" for a year, this is for you.

THEY SAID

"Doing something for myself feels strange."

YOUR HOOK

You spent 30 years putting everyone else first. Doing something for yourself feels strange. That's normal. Do it anyway.

THEY SAID

"Pivot to what?"

YOUR HOOK

Everyone says it's not too late. Nobody tells you what to actually start.

THEY SAID

"Do you use AI to write this? Trust matters to me."

YOUR HOOK

Yes, I use AI. Here's exactly how, because trust matters to me too.

7 hook patterns you can reuse

Swap in your own audience's words and your own answer.

PATTERN	FILL IN THE BLANKS
The age mirror	"I'm [your age]. If you've been [their words], this is for you."
That's normal	"[Their feeling]. That's normal. Here's what I did."
Nobody tells you	"Everyone says [common advice]. Nobody tells you [their real question]."
The real fear	"[What they think the problem is] isn't the scary part. [Their real feeling] is."
The honest answer	"Yes, [the thing they worry about]. Here's exactly how, because [their value] matters to me too."
The permission slip	"It's your turn now. You've waited long enough."
I'll go first	"Tell me [their thing]. I'll go first: [yours]."

Post it and watch

Post your hook, then read your own comments. That's where you find out what worked.

How to spot a winner

- People write "this is me" or "I needed this."
- People tag a friend.
- People share their own story back.

The comment magnet

On two different posts I studied, the comments filled up with people sharing their age and what they started. Nobody asked them to. They just wanted to share.

A

I started my business at 50! It's been the best seven years!

B

Launch day today of my new business... nervous and excited. Aged 51!

C

I'm 60 and have never felt better! Even started 2 Instagram accounts!

So now I end posts with a question like this:

"How old were you when you started something new? I'll go first: 58."

THE BEST PART

The comments on YOUR posts become your next hooks. The method feeds itself, so you'll never run out.

CHAPTER 10

The goldmine

What I learned from studying 8 posts and hundreds of comments from people aged 45 to 80.

8 things I learned

- 1 The #1 blocker isn't tech. It's "Pivot to what?"
Everyone online says "it's not too late." Almost nobody shows people what to actually start. That gap is where you come in.
- 2 Women and men worry about different things.
Men mostly asked, "Can I still do this?" Women mostly asked, "Am I allowed to do this for me?" The phrase women repeated again and again was "It's your turn now."
- 3 The deepest fear isn't money. It's feeling useless.
"Invisible." "Disposable." "Redundant." People want to feel useful again. The line readers loved most: turn experience into usefulness.
- 4 Money-number titles did worse.
One writer's biggest post by far was about a broken promise: "We were told we'd be taken care of." Her posts with income numbers in the title did the worst. Honesty performs better.
- 5 People over 50 can smell hype a mile away.
They made fun of lines like "just 9 minutes a day and in 30 days you won't recognize yourself!" Plain, calm and honest wins.
- 6 They want to learn AI, but only from someone they trust.
One woman wanted to learn "AI beyond Google searches" to find remote work. Another asked a writer straight out if she used AI. Being open about how you use AI is a strength.
- 7 Real people beat polished people.
"It's so much more compelling to watch real humans." Helping one real person on camera turns viewers into cheerleaders.
- 8 They say their age first.
Almost every comment started with an age. Use yours.

40 hooks from my research

Written for people over 50 starting something new. Borrow the pattern, then swap in your own audience's words.

ALMOST STARTING

- 01 "I'm 58. If you've been 'close to starting' for a year, this is for you."
- 02 "You don't have a tech problem. You have a 'where do I even start' problem."
- 03 "Everyone says it's not too late. Nobody tells you what to actually start."
- 04 "My age isn't the headline. The years I spent 'on the fence' are."
- 05 "You've had the idea for years. You just haven't pressed post."
- 06 "Your daughter keeps telling you to do this. She's right."

TOO OLD

- 07 "You're not starting from scratch. You're starting from 40 years of knowing things."
- 08 "It's not your age. It's who you think you're supposed to be by now."
- 09 "Surrounded by 25-year-olds online and feel like a fraud? You're not late. You're seasoned."
- 10 "Corporate says you're aging out. I say you just arrived."
- 11 "I thought I was the only one starting over at 58. I'm not."

PERMISSION ("MY TURN")

- 12 "It's your turn now. You've waited long enough."
- 13 "You spent 30 years putting everyone else first. Doing something for yourself feels strange. That's normal. Do it anyway."
- 14 "You didn't start late. You started when life finally gave you room."
- 15 "Nobody is going to hand you a turn. So let me show you how to take one."
- 16 "The house is quiet now. What used to light you up?"
- 17 "What would you build if nobody you know was watching?"

FEELING USELESS OR INVISIBLE

- 18 "Retirement isn't the scary part. Feeling useless is."
- 19 "You're not disposable. You just haven't put what you know to work yet."
- 20 "Forty years of knowing things. Let's make it useful."
- 21 "They see us as buyers. I'd rather you be a builder."
- 22 "Nobody handed us a map for this part of life. So I'm drawing one."

MONEY WORRY (NO INCOME PROMISES)

- 23 "We were told if we worked hard, we'd be fine. A lot of us are finding out that's not true."
24 "Social Security won't stretch. Delivery driving isn't the plan. So what is?"
25 "At 26 you have nothing to lose. At 58 you have everything to lose. That's why I started small."
26 "Nobody gave us a plan for the second half. So I made one."

SCARED OF THE CAMERA

- 27 "Didn't like how you look on camera? Me neither. Here's how I got around it."
28 "Shy? Good. The quiet ones make the most honest content."

TRUST, AI AND GURUS

- 29 "Yes, I use AI. Here's exactly how, because trust matters to me too."
30 "Learning AI beyond Google searches. That's all step one is."
31 "You don't have to compete with the kids. You have to use the tools they use, with the brain you already have."
32 "Been burned by an online course before? Me too. Here's what I do differently."
33 "No guru talk. Here's exactly what I do, and exactly what I don't promise."
34 "Nobody here is going to hustle you."

REAL, HONEST STORIES

- 35 "Nobody posts about the scary middle part. So I will."
36 "I realized I never properly introduced myself. Here's who I am, and why I do this."
37 "Am I doing this next chapter right? Here's what I'd tell you over coffee."

COMMENT MAGNETS

- 38 "How old were you when you started something new? I'll go first: 58."
39 "Tell me your age and one thing you started after 45."
40 "What's the fear you hear yourself saying most? Tell me below."

CHAPTER 12 • BONUS

Find your next product in the comments

The same comments that give you hooks also tell you what to make.
Hooks get their attention. Products solve their problem.

Build what they're already asking for

Most people build a product first and hope someone wants it. This works backwards. Find the problem people keep asking about, then make the thing that solves it.

1 Your biggest pile is your product.

The fear that shows up most is the problem people most want solved. "I don't know where to start" becomes a simple starter guide.

2 Their questions are your product titles.

See the table below.

3 Solve ONE problem.

One problem, one kind of person, a short time. "Find your niche in one afternoon," not "everything you need to build a business."

4 Their words are your sales page.

When people read their own words describing the problem, they think: this was made for me.

5 Test with a post before you build.

Lots of "this is me"? Build it. People asking "where can I get this?" Definitely build it. Quiet? Try the next pile.

6 Keep listening after you launch.

Your buyers' next question is your next product.

THEY KEEP ASKING

A SMALL PRODUCT THAT ANSWERS IT

"Pivot to what?"

Pivot to What? 10 simple businesses you can start after 50

"What niche should I pick?"

Find Your Niche in One Afternoon

"I hate how I look on camera."

Camera-Shy Content: show up without showing your face

"How do I use AI beyond Google?"

AI Beyond Google: your first week with an AI assistant

How I actually did it: Claude + Eden

This guide is the best example of its own method. I didn't spend a week scrolling. I used a research tool called Eden and connected it to Claude, my AI assistant. Then I told Claude what I was looking for:

"Find me posts where people over 50 talk about being too old to start, or not knowing where to begin."

Claude searched Eden for my audience's fears

"Too old to start." "Starting over at 50." "Burnt out and stuck." It looked across YouTube, Instagram, LinkedIn and Substack at once, and found the people I was looking for.

It built me a board

It saved the 11 best posts to a new board in Eden and wrote a note under each one saying why it was worth studying.

I copied the comments

I opened each post and pasted the comments into Claude. The first video alone had about 750.

Claude found the goldmine

It pulled out the sentences that mattered, sorted them into fear piles, and saved it all into one Hook Bank note right on my board.

I made the choices

I read the Hook Bank, picked the lines that gave me chills, and turned them into hooks. That's my 10%. AI did the other 90%.

Try Eden: days of scrolling become one afternoon

Eden saves time on the hardest part: finding the right posts. Describe your audience and it brings the posts to you, organized on a board. Nice to have, not required: every step here also works with free YouTube search.

<https://eden.so/?via=eden-6ebcdbf62229>

Go further: make it, then post it

Once your Hook Bank is full, you're holding two things most people never have: proof of what your audience wants, and a month of posts.

1. Turn your research into your own ebook

That's exactly what I did: this guide started as one afternoon of comment research.

1 Take your biggest pile.

That's the problem your ebook solves.

2 Ask Claude to outline it.

Use the Product Prompt in chapter 16. Give it your piles and your own experience.

3 Write it in your voice.

Use their words to describe the problem, and your own story to show the way through.

4 Test it with a post first.

If people say "I want this," build it and sell it as a simple PDF.

A small, focused ebook can become a product you sell again and again, a real way to start bringing in some extra income. I won't promise what it will earn, because nobody honestly can. But it's simple, and it's yours.

2. Post your hooks without living on your phone

Writing hooks is half the job. Posting every day is the other half, and that's where most people burn out. I use Blotato: I load a week of posts in one sitting, and they go out on Facebook, Instagram and Threads on their own, while I'm out living my life.

Try Blotato

Load a week of posts in one sitting instead of posting by hand every day. The whole loop: find their words (Eden) → hooks (Claude) → post (Blotato) → read the new comments → repeat.

<https://blotato.com/?ref=josee>

Your 30-minute weekly routine

Pick one day a week. Put the kettle on. Here's the whole routine.

TIME	WHAT TO DO
5 min	Search 1 fear phrase. Pick 1 real-story post with lots of comments.
15 min	Read the comments and replies. Copy 10 to 15 lines into your Hook Bank.
5 min	Paste them into AI with the Sort Prompt. Note your biggest pile.
5 min	Use the Hook Prompt to write 5 hooks. Pick your favorite 3 for the week.

Thirty minutes, and a week of hooks.

New to Claude? Start with a free week using my link:

<https://claude.ai/referral/F8tzMGyYig>

The prompt pack

Copy these into Claude or any AI assistant. Change the words in [brackets].

THE SORT PROMPT

Here are comments I copied from posts about [your audience's biggest fear]. Sort them into piles by the fear behind each one: too old, don't know where to start, money worry, scared of the camera, "am I allowed a turn," feeling invisible, don't trust gurus. Add a new pile if you find one. Tell me which pile is biggest, and quote the 3 strongest comments in each pile. Comments: [paste here]

THE HOOK PROMPT

Here are real comments from my audience: [paste the strongest comments]. My audience is [who they are]. I help them [what you do]. For each comment, write 3 hooks that use their exact words and add a simple answer from me. Keep it kitchen-table simple, like I'm talking to a friend. No hype, no income promises, no big claims.

THE PATTERN PROMPT

Read these comments: [paste]. What words or phrases do people repeat? What do they say first? What are they afraid of but not saying directly? Give me 5 patterns in plain language.

THE POST PROMPT

Turn this hook into a short Facebook post: "[your hook]". Structure: the hook, a short honest story from me, 3 simple steps or points, and end with this question: "[your comment-magnet question]". Use short sentences. 5th-grade reading level. No hype. About me: [2 lines about you].

THE REPLY PROMPT

Someone commented on my post: "[their comment]".

Write 3 warm, short replies I could use, then tell me what hook their comment could become for a future post.

THE PRODUCT PROMPT

Here are real comments from my audience, sorted by fear: [paste your piles].

My audience is [who they are].

1. Which problem shows up most and feels most urgent?
2. Give me 5 small digital product ideas that each solve ONE of these problems in a short time (a guide, checklist, template or mini course).
3. For the best idea, write a title, a one-line promise (no income claims), and 5 bullet points for a sales page using my audience's exact words.
4. Write one hook I can post to test if people want it.

Worksheets

Print these, or copy them into a notebook.

1 • My 3 fears

Fear 1 and my search words

Fear 2 and my search words

Fear 3 and my search words

2 • Post check

Post I'm studying

- ☐ A real person with a real story
- ☐ Lots of comments, not just likes
- ☐ NOT a "comment a word" post
- ☐ NOT just "age is just a number"
- ☐ People share their own stories in the comments

Ticked all 5? Dig in.

3 • My Hook Bank page

Source

EXACT WORDS	AGE	KIND

What I noticed

4 • Their words + my answer

THEY SAID	MY HOOK

5 • After I posted

Hook I used

☐ People said "this is me"

Best comment I got (my next hook!)

6 • From comments to product

My biggest pile

The question people keep asking

My product title, and the ONE problem it solves

Their exact words for my sales page

My test post hook

☐ People said "I want this"

ONE LAST THING

Your people already wrote it.

You don't need to be clever to write great hooks. You need to be curious enough to read what people are already telling you, and kind enough to answer them honestly.

Now you know where to find them.

You're one of my first readers, thank you. This is a launch edition, and your honest review means the world to me. Try one step this week, then come tell me what you found (and what I should add) inside my free community. I read every single one.

Josée

Want the whole AI system I use to run my business, with the AI employees and the brain file? Come join my free community:

<https://www.skool.com/ai-digital-society-5263/>

This guide is for education. It makes no promise of income, followers or sales. Examples are shortened, anonymous comments shared to show how real people talk.